Boyd, Jahn Earn LOAs for Moving Chaplains to Sea

PENSACOLA, Fla. -- A recent mandate by the Chief of Naval Operations to move 90 Chaplain billets from shore duty to sea duty required the dedication of the Chief of Naval Education and Training's (CNET) Operations Support Division director and management analyst to demonstrate their ability and knowledge regarding Navy manpower and personnel.

Former CNET retired Vice Adm. John W. Craine Jr., honored management analyst, Al D. Boyd, and director, Susan M. Jahn, recently for their long hours of dedication toward moving 90 Chaplain Corps billets from shore to sea.

"Over the years the Chaplain's Corps has undergone many incremental changes, but this change required the specialized skill from the real experts in the manpower and personnel arena. Not only did you demonstrate your ability and knowledge regarding manpower and personnel, you gave it your personal touch and went beyond the call of duty to ensure that the right people remained in the right places to serve our Sailors and their families," according to a letter from Craine.
